Into The Unknown

Rodriquez was astute enough to keep details of his dubious business activities out of Alqueria and across the border in Spain. The Alquerian Popular Front were about to launch a sortie across the border. The sortie had been delayed so Manuela could have a walnut removed from her person, she didn't actually want it removed by it was impeding her movement, oh and Antonio kept the walnut.

The three meet at midnight on the Alquerian side of the border, that had orders to black up. Antonio had used burnt cork on his face, it was a reasonable effect apart from the eyes. Antonio had 'golf ball', the whites of which contrasted wonderfully with the burnt cork. He tried walking with his eyes closed but this negated the stealth achieved by using the cork. Loco Paco took things too literally, again and painted himself from head to foot in matt emulsion, Manuela sent him home to put some closed on. Manuela had blacked-up with a very expensive skin care cream and selected a suitable lipstick to harmonise with the colour. Rushing into the hairdresser she shouted “Girls! Girls! I have a top secret clandestine military operation tonight and my hair's a mess, please help me!”